HONOR AND MERIT AWARDS CEREMONY

Monday, 26 January 1976

9:00 a.m.

Presentation by Mr. William E. Colby
Director of Central Intelligence

DISTINGUISHED INTELLIGENCE MEDAL

to

Mr. Carl E. Duckett

MR. COLBY: We have a very special event here which is to award you, Carl, your second Distinguished Intelligence Medal. Ben?

DEPUTY DIRECTOR OF PERSONNEL - MR. DeFELICE: Citation: Mr. Carl E. Duckett is hereby awarded the Distinguished Intelligence Medal in recognition of his outstanding service with the Central Intelligence Agency. Since 1969 he has been Program Director of a major undertaking of the utmost importance to the United States. Mr. Duckett's oversight, guidance, and direction of this complex project represented a shining example of his almost ineffable talents. His understanding of the technical, political and industrial nexi involved in the organization of the program were critical in the remarkable degree of success attained. Mr. Duckett's overall contribution reflects the highest credit on him, the Central Intelligence Agency and the Federal service.

DIRECTOR OF CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE; We thank you, too. No, this is something that we've had to do - sorry we didn't do it the other day, Carl. I've been a little preoccupied lately. Maybe with some of those nexi Ben was talking about. But this medal is really given to you with the warmest of admiration of all of us for a great job. Despite the fact that that citation didn't say so, it had something to do with a boat which Carl still owns. You can go out and sail on it.

But seriously, we really appreciate enormously the imagination, the drive, the enthusiasm that Carl has given this whole Agency, not only in Science and Technology but in the Management Committee - and just sit around here and give us good advice and some sharp criticism once in awhile for what we do. It's really been a great contribution.

As you know, I say we know that only part of the thing belongs to Carl. Part of it belongs to you, Jane. We do thank you.

These colleagues here in the Agency, all of whom have worked with Carl over these years, are delighted to recognize this extra accomplishment and to look forward to a few others in the future, which we're sure are going to come out of that fertile mind. Thank you.

MR. DUCKETT: Bill, thank you very much.
